eyes. Being a Vaishnav, I have been visiting the place since I was a child," he said. "But one day, as an adult, I discovered the aesthetics of the city and saw it from a third-person's perspective.

That was the turning point."

Ambalal said he began taking pictures of the town, which is Lord Srinathji's seat, to document its milieu. "I was also concerned with the results," he said. "The pictures needed to be of good quality and I wanted to take them beyond just documentation."

The exhibition showcases 31 photographs, and each is priced at Rs4,500. Special discounts are available on the photographs till the 14th of March, when the exhibition concludes. The pictures are also available online.

thetics of the town that made it a charming place with a unique character," Ambalal said. He is a furniture designer by profession. "I shot these photographs during the course of three trips I made to the town." The exhibition is Ambalal's first solo show in the city.

"The exhibition is all about Nathdwara, as I see it through my

CAROLINE ANDRADE

ANUJ Ambalal's photographs that celebrate the enchanting, piety-steeped Nathdwara are featured at an ongoing exhibition at Amdavad ni gufa; curiously, when Ambalal captured the images, he never imagined they would be part of a public show.

"My aim was to portray the aes-
